Romans: The Transforming Power of the Righteousness of God

Interlude

Teachers, this is not really a lesson but a warning about the next lesson.

The next lesson, 25b, is an interlude lesson. You can see the explanation on the first page of that lesson.

The reason I'm including this sheet is to warn you not to print the whole next lesson without looking at it! It is extremely long, as I provided three different ideas (lessons) for you to choose from.

A review sheet has been provided for students, but I did not create student notes for the different teaching options—you'll need to provide one if you feel the need for it.

Please feel free to choose any one of the three options or if there is a section from Romans 6-8 that you feel you need to go back to and dwell on, please do so.

Also, for Easter Sunday, March 23, there is a very basic, short and interactive lesson you can use to help people focus on Easter. But feel free to replace it if you wish.

For the March 30 lesson I will provide an Old Testament Survey to help prepare people for the wonderful truths in Romans 9-11 which we will seek to cover in only 5 weeks.

That lesson will be followed by our Global Impact conference during which missionaries will be assigned to your class both Sundays.

There are some wonderful events planned for the conference so please encourage your class members to fully engage.

If you have questions please feel free to contact me (skilgore@calvarychurch.org).
